

“Soft Skills” are the New Hard Skills

Your job is 2 jobs !

Job # 1

What you're accountable for:

- The “nuts and bolts”
- Results: Tangible - Measurable

Prioritizes HARD SKILLS – technical, analytical, data

Why Do “Soft Skills” Matter?

- Soft Skills are about making people comfortable -- INCLUDING, not excluding people.
- Soft Skills are also about the kind of polish that shows you can be trusted and taken seriously.
- Trust and relationships are at stake. They speed up everything and lower costs of doing business.

Business Trends

The Changing Arena

- New technologies. New businesses.
- Diverse audiences.
- Increased expectations of professionals today.

Technical Skills (Math and Science) Are Not Enough

The jobs that have grown consistently in the last two decades have been those that require:

▶ High Math and Science Skills

AND

▶ High Social Skills

Change in share of jobs – 1980 to 2012

■ Fell ● Grew

Source: David Deming, Harvard University

Objectives

- ▼ Identify two key attributes of Soft Skills most sought-after in today's professionals.
- ▼ Understand how you can strengthen your own capabilities in these areas.

Communicator

Relationship
Builder

Communicator

The Key Word . . .

CIVILIANS

Key Principles:

- ▶ “Civilian” – anyone who does not have your knowledge and expertise. That could include your CEO.
- ▶ Communication is leadership. If you have “the goods,” your leadership at that moment is not dependent on a title.
- ▶ Consultant, coach, counselor. These roles are the most critical value-add. You do these WITH, not TO people.

Your Tool Box

Communicator

How We Communicate

What can you do?

- You must become “multi-lingual” in how you communicate.
- Avoid jargon.
- Effective verbal communication is ongoing and two-way.
- Analytics are a “language.” Tell the story.
- A picture is worth 1000 words.
- Social media has changed us all.

Relationship Builder

The Key Word . . .

PROACTIVE

What's at stake? TRUST – RESPECT

TRUST → Reduces resistance. Makes it easier to have the kind of conversation necessary to impact the business.

RESPECT → Mutual respect among professionals enables your consultative role. Others will accept that you are there to add value to the business.

Key Principles: RELATIONSHIPS

- ▼ “Just-in-time” networking is for cocktail parties.
- ▼ Building healthy relationships throughout an organization takes time.
- ▼ It’s up to you to take the initiative in either case.

Your Tool Box

Relationship Builder

• • • • • • • • • •

What can you do?

- ▶ Invest the time to build genuine relationships well in advance of “needing” them.
- ▶ Put yourself out there. Introduce yourself – don’t wait for them to come to you.
- ▶ Learn people’s names. Learn something about them – personally and professionally.
- ▶ Make the other person feel heard, valued, respected.

The Introductions Quiz

◆ Where should you wear your nametag – on your left or your right?

Right

◆ When introducing your boss and a new co-worker, whose name should you say first?

Boss

◆ When introducing a client and your boss, whose name should you say first?

Client

The Introductions Quiz

- ◆ If you forget someone's name, just pretend you don't see them. False
- ◆ If someone mispronounces your name, correct them loudly so all can hear. False
- ◆ Always stand when introducing yourself. True

Small Talk Don'ts and Do's

Don't

- ◆ Make it all about you. Don't give every detail on a topic
- ◆ Interrogate. "Conversing" should be friendly
- ◆ Interrupt the other person
- ◆ Complain
- ◆ Try to "one-up" the other person
- ◆ Glance around the room while someone is talking with you
- ◆ Give too much personal information

Do

Choose safe, interesting topics:

- ◆ Ask, "How did you get started?"
- ◆ Achievements. Goals
- ◆ Relevant article read or website discovered, about their field
- ◆ Hobbies and leisure activities
- ◆ Community involvements
- ◆ Entertainment – movies, sports
- ◆ Current events (non-controversial)
- ◆ Family (light - not too personal)

CIVILIANS

* * *

Communicator

PROACTIVE

* * *

Relationship
Builder

Builder